summer institute

Courses in survey research methods conducted by the research staff of the Survey Research Center,
Institute for Social Research, University of Michigan

June 6 - July 29, 2005

The annual Summer Institute is a training program in survey research techniques taught by the staff of the Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan and other survey research specialists.

This program is for students and professionals who work or need to work with surveys, and survey data, work in a statistical office, or are interested in quantitative research methods in general. Detailed information about the courses, instructors, and our on-line application will be available on our website in January 2005.

Contact the Summer Institute with any questions or to receive a copy of the full brochure about the program and courses.

Registration and Costs

Summer Institute courses may be taken for academic credit. Current University of Michigan students may receive academic credit for attending. If you are a student from another university, you may register as a Summer Guest for transfer of credit. Costs for students taking courses for graduate credit are based on University of Michigan tuition rates.

Tuition rates are subject to change without notice by the Regents of the University of Michigan.

Many students choose to enroll as "Summer Scholars," without credit. To learn more about attending the Summer Institute as a Summer Scholar, please view our website www.isr.umich.edu/src/si

International Students

International students should apply early to allow adequate time for the processing of visa requests.
